The Hansom

- The lounge pays tribute to the Hansom Cab, a two-wheeled horse-drawn carriage invented by Joseph Hansom in 1834. Known for its speed and manoeuvrability, it remained a key part of London's streets until 1947.
- The Hansom is situated in what was originally the cobbled driveway, where Hansom Cabs once collected and dropped off passengers arriving at the station.
- Open every day for international and British favorites
- Afternoon Tea (live music on the weekends)

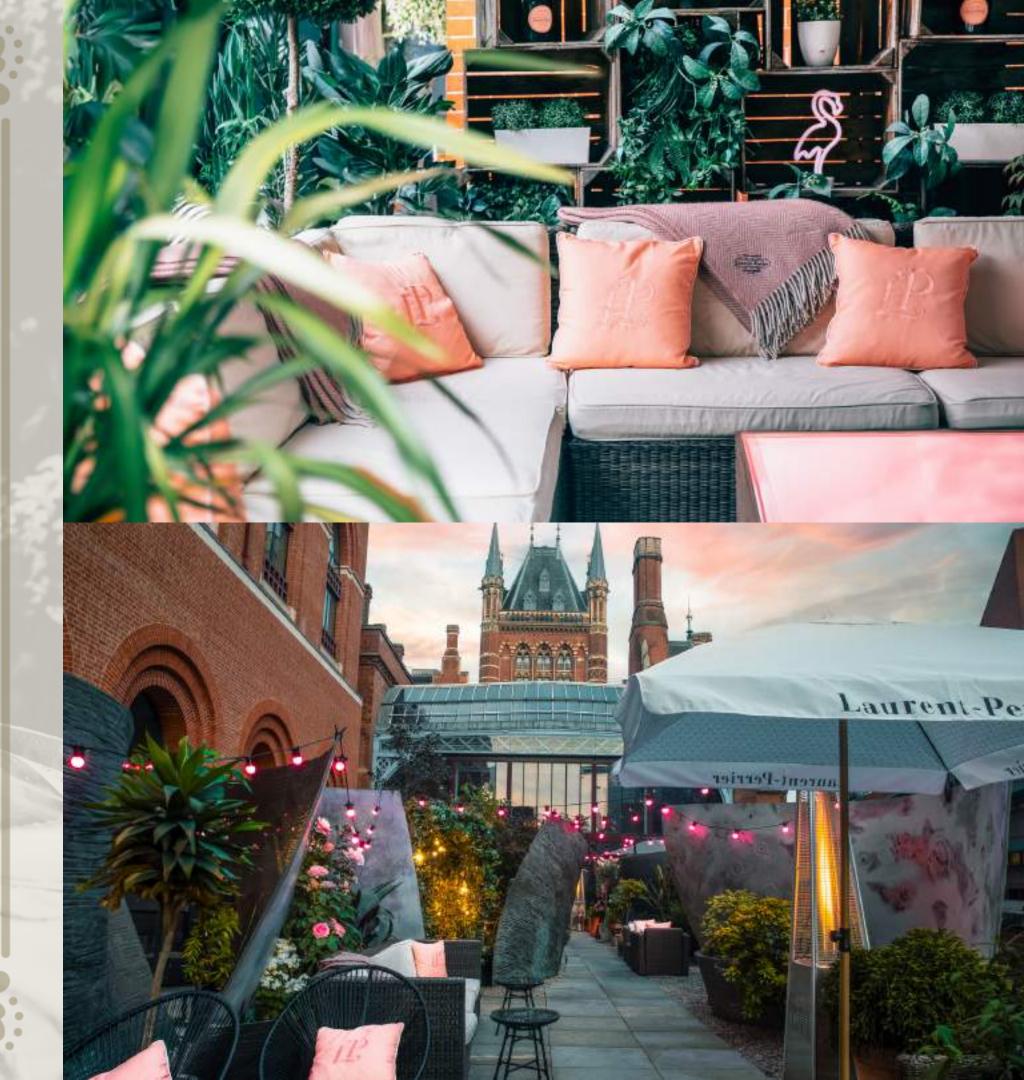

Booking Office 1869

- The bar and restaurant is open every day, serving all day dining, drinks and snacks along with cocktails and a Sunday Roast.
- The original ticket booth inside the Booking Office is a listed structure, preserving its historical significance within the space.
- Booking Office 1869 offers own label beer, named St Pancras Beer. Brewed exclusively by Oldershaw Brewery, this golden lager-style beer features citrus notes with hints of apple and peach.
- The cocktail menu draws inspiration from the ceiling of the Grand Staircase, with drinks named after the panels of the Eight Virtues, incorporating influences from the Victorian era.
- Booking Office 1869 opened in November 2021, transforming the historic 19th-century ticket hall into a vibrant drinking and dining destination in King's Cross.

Victor Garvey at Midland Grand

Rediscover the elegance of French haute cuisine in one of London's most beautiful dining rooms. Helmed by Michelin-starred chef Victor Garvey, this opulent dining room offers a modern take on French classics with a focus on world-class ingredients and innovative techniques. Indulge in refined dishes like butter-poached lobster, complemented by theatrical table-side service. Experience French grandeur reimagined in an ambience that epitomises old-world charm infused with contemporary flair. Guests can choose from à la carte, prix fixe, tasting, or degustation menus, ensuring a memorable dining experience that harmonises history with modernity.

Gothic Bar

 Nestled in the original entrance of the Midland Grand Hotel, Gothic Bar is an intimate late-night destination where history meets contemporary cocktail artistry. Under the expert guidance of renowned Bar Manager Jack Porter, this refined space offers a cocktail list that seamlessly blends classic inspirations with avant-garde techniques.

Barlow House

Named after William Barlow, the engineer of St. Pancras Station's single-span arch, Barlow House contains 207 guest rooms.

The modern and elegantly designed rooms offer a range of options, from Queens to Kings to Twins, catering to various guest preferences, along with interconnecting rooms for larger groups. Generously proportioned (between 25m2—32m2), the rooms feature comfortable beds with down mattress toppers and 300-count Egyptian cotton linens, ensuring a luxurious night's sleep. The 'technology-pack' in each room enables seamless online connectivity and international cable and satellite channels are available for entertainment.

Chambers

At the heart of the hotel, behind the fairytale Gothic façade, are 38 Chambers suites — the epitome of contemporary luxury, encased in lavish Victorian grandeur.

The towering ceilings, marble fireplaces and bathrooms, and the dazzling period detail are all constants. Each suite though, is bespoke with a character all of its own, restored to its former glory and rejuvenated by the integration of the latest must-have technologies. Guests seeking an exceptionally luxurious experience can indulge in one of our 6 Signature Suites, where they can immerse themselves in contemporary luxury and lavish Victorian grandeur.

Floor Plan

Occupying the prestigious location where Hansom cabs once deposited their well-heeled passengers, Hansom Hall combines Victorian splendour with contemporary style, making our largest event space both unique and memorable. From a grand banquet for up to 280 guests or a reception for 575 to the more intimate, tailored event that spills onto the open-air terrace, Hansom Hall makes every occasion an unforgettable experience.

Also known as Roof Garden, the Hansom Hall Terrace is available for exclusive hire. Overlooking the British Library, this rooftop is perfect for any social occasion.

Connected to the Ladies Smoking Room, The Gallery is a magnificent backdrop for special occasions. Stunning views of the hotels exterior, corniced ceilings, and beautiful chandeliers. Another romantically rich setting, with period features and authentic furnishings.

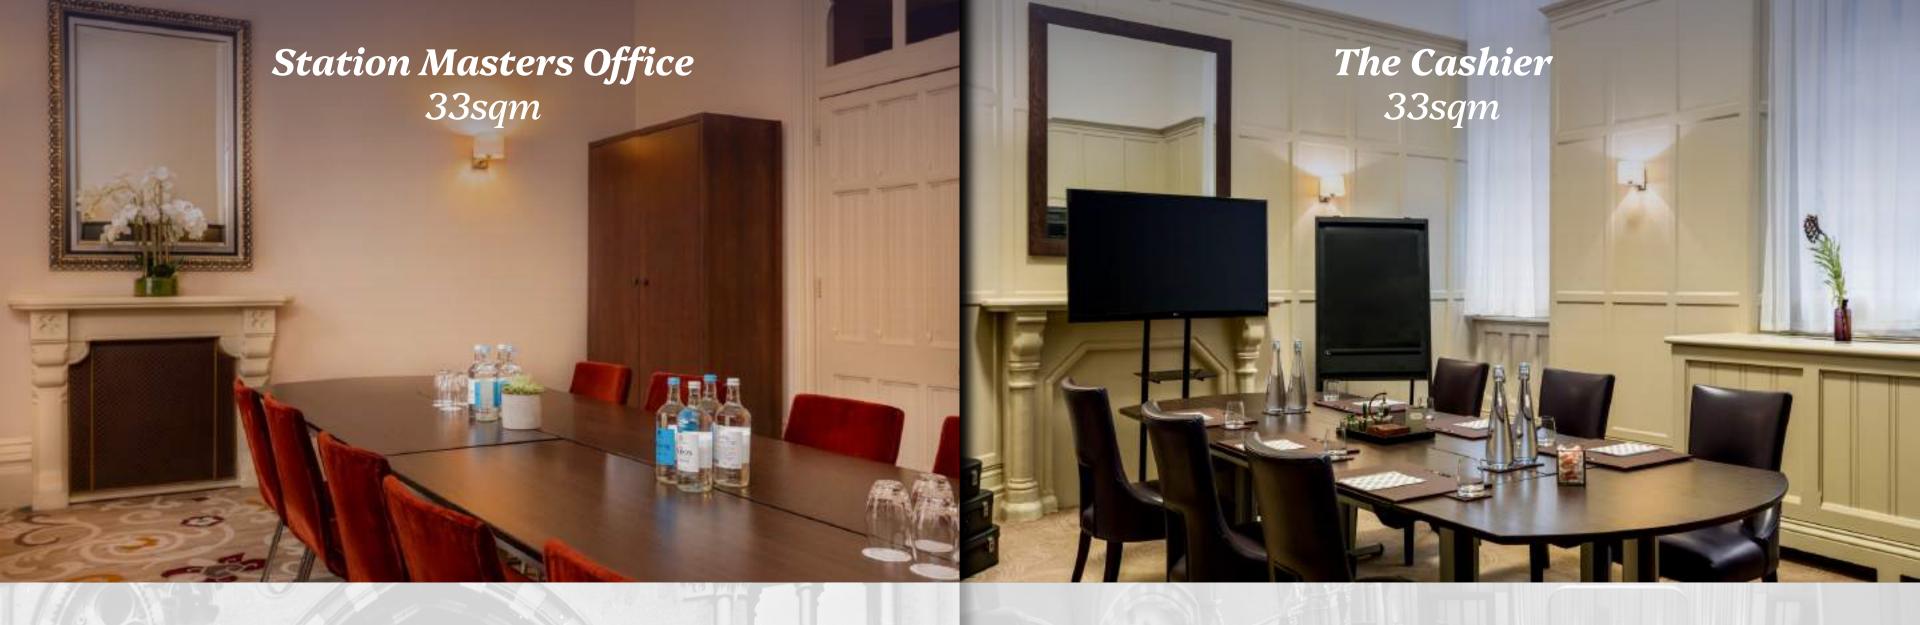

The elaborately detailed Ladies' Smoking Room, is an intrinsically romantic room, steeped in unique history. The room features hand-painted ceilings, intricately carved arches, and grand French doors leading to an exclusive private terrace.

In its former life as staff quarters, this event space has witnessed its share of memorable encounters. Today that tradition continues as it hosts occasions from the corporate lunch for 30 to a candlelit dinner for two. Simultaneously grand and intimate, the room features original wooden beams and double height ceilings.

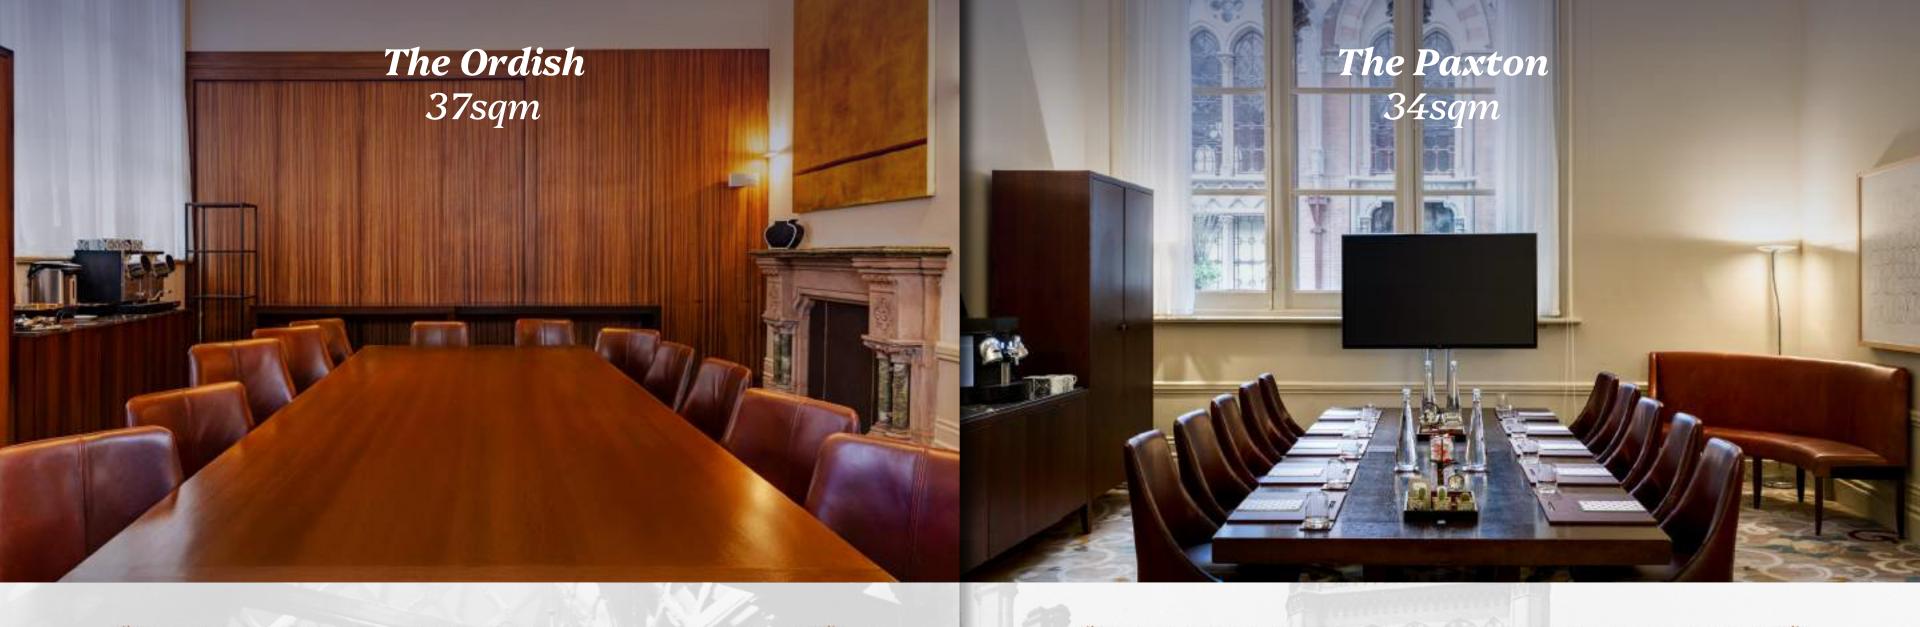

In 1876 — just three years after the hotel opened — Alexander Graham Bell made the historic first transmission of clear speech by telephone. The Exchange is where the hotel's telephone auto exchange was installed.

When the Midland Grand Hotel first opened, billiards was popular among the upper classes. The hotel included a room dedicated to it, where gentlemen could challenge each other perhaps while their partners relaxed in the Ladies' Smoking Room.

When St. Pancras Station was built, the first station master insisted that his office be based not in the terminus building but, in the quieter, more prestigious surroundings of the hotel.

In Victorian times, hotel finances were looked after by The Cashier's Office. The Cashier's job was to collect money from guests for their lodging accommodations and any other fees they may have incurred during their stay.

Rowland Mason Ordish was an English engineer who worked with William Henry Barlow on the roof of St. Pancras railway station.

Joseph Paxton was the designer of the cast iron and glass Crystal Palace for The Great Exhibition of 1851. He was also a director of the Midland Railway and associate of William Barlow.
