OUR STORY

VILLA MARQUIS

The essence of Villa Marquis finds its origin in unique elements and historic events across landscape of Paris. House of great artists since its opening in 1823 such as Victor Hugo and many other brilliant personalities, Rue Jean Goujon has been the hotspot of the cultural and artistic Parisian and international scene.

While the Universal Exhibition of 1889 in Paris was taking place changing the international vision of art, engineering and culture, giving birth to Art Nouveau, artists from all across the world came to the Parisian residence of the marquises and aristocrats of the time to exhibit their works at bourgeois events.

The Universal Exhibition starring the world-known Eiffel Tower and the beauty of its engineering, became the main inspiration for the architecture of the hotel, lead by the renowned Spanish architect, Alvaro Sans. Refined shapes and colors, sophistication and bold geometric forms as well as the symmetry and sobriety of the linear shapes of Art Déco are what characterizes our façade and became art.

Historically connected to the Hurault de Vibraye dynasty, who played a key role in the cultural scene of Paris and are known also as owners of the famous Château de Cheverny, this unique building was home to nine Marquis of the family for nearly 600 years and has steeped in history being spectator of the French political, economical and cultural conjunctions, and actor of the Parisian life.

Villa Marquis embodies the history and the beauty of the most significant artistic and cultural movements of Paris, as well as the Marquis' life and its aristocratic atmosphere.
